La situación económica y el mercado de capitales en el periodo de presentación de informes/perspectivas

Ambiente económico sólido, aunque comportamiento nervioso por parte de los inversores

En los seis meses analizados hasta finales de marzo de 2018, la economía mundial se mantuvo en su trayectoria de crecimiento, aunque recientemente ha habido mayores fluctuaciones de precios en los mercados financieros, especialmente en los países desarrollados, debido a las crecientes preocupaciones sobre la inflación y el riesgo de una guerra comercial.

En Estados Unidos y Japón, la economía se mantuvo fuerte, mientras que el impulso de crecimiento en Europa se debilitó. Particularmente en los mercados asiáticos emergentes, se observó una tendencia alcista sostenida. Por su parte, en América Latina y Europa del Este, el panorama fue variado.

Los bancos centrales de los países desarrollados siguieron un rumbo diferente. En EE. UU., se produjeron otros dos aumentos de los tipos ante el aumento de los riesgos inflacionarios. Dada la inflación acelerada del Reino Unido, el Banco de Inglaterra también aumentó moderadamente sus tipos de interés. Por su parte, el Banco Central Europeo, mantuvo su política de tipo de interés cero y no previó una subida anticipada de los tipos. En Japón, el banco central no modificó su política monetaria extremadamente relajada, pero anunció un ajuste para el 2019.

Mercados de renta variable: Aumento de las fluctuaciones de precios, fuertes diferencias regionales

Las respectivas tendencias económicas y monetarias se reflejaron en desarrollos muy diferentes en las bolsas de las distintas regiones.

A pesar de una fuerte corrección en el primer trimestre de 2018, el mercado bursátil estadounidense terminó el período arrojando unos valores significativamente positivos (calculados en dólares). El mercado de renta variable japonés también presentaba cifras positivas, aunque la mayor parte de los aumentos de precios se perdieron nuevamente debido a la preocupación por una desaceleración del comercio mundial.

Por otro lado, hubo algunas pérdidas notables en el mercado bursátil europeo. Aunque el impulso de beneficios de la mayoría de las empresas se mantuvo positivo, sufrieron un comportamiento de inversión más sombrío. Esto se debió a la apreciación del euro y la libra, así como a las inquietudes políticas en varios países.

En los mercados emergentes, la mayoría de las bolsas de valores registraron un aumento apreciable de los precios. En Asia, el mercado de renta variable chino destacó positivamente, mientras que en Europa del Este, los títulos-valores rusos se comportaron particularmente bien, sobre todo debido al aumento del precio del petróleo. En América Latina, el optimismo emergente en Brasil fue contrarrestado por un sentimiento más sombrío en México como consecuencia de desastres naturales.

La volatilidad, es decir, la fluctuación de los precios bursátiles, aumentó significativamente en el primer trimestre de 2018 en concreto. Esto obedecía a una mayor preocupación sobre la inflación y los factores relacionados con la incertidumbre política.

Inversiones que devengan intereses: Tendencias diferenciadas

Los mercados de bonos internacionales también arrojaron rendimientos variados.

En el mercado monetario y el segmento de corto plazo, los rendimientos se mantuvieron extremadamente bajos en la mayoría de los países desarrollados como resultado de las políticas de tipos de interés bajos de los bancos centrales. Por el contrario, los rendimientos a largo plazo en EE. UU. aumentaron, impulsados por las buenas perspectivas económicas continuas y el potencial de inflación. Esto no solo se asoció con los bonos del Estado de tasa decreciente, sino particularmente con los valores de alto rendimiento cuyos diferenciales de rendimiento volvieron a subir. Los activos con cobertura de tipos no procedentes de operaciones bursátiles de EE. UU. también sufrieron la devaluación del dólar en euros.

En la zona del euro, la deuda soberana se mantuvo mejor, dada la persistencia de la baja inflación y los tipos de interés clave. Recientemente, las primas de riesgo disminuyeron nuevamente para los países periféricos de la zona del euro, lo que contribuyó a la tendencia del segmento de bonos del gobierno de tener un buen rendimiento en la región. De media, los resultados moderadamente positivos también pesaron sobre los valores corporativos y de alto rendimiento en la zona del euro.

Los títulos-valores que devengan intereses de los países emergentes se desarrollaron de manera muy diferente. En Asia, los precios de los bonos chinos e indios disminuyeron, mientras que algunos bonos en moneda local de la región tuvieron un buen rendimiento debido a los efectos del tipo de cambio. En Europa del Este, los bonos rusos obtuvieron beneficios después de que la calificación de S&P de Rusia volviera al estado de grado de inversión. Los bonos turcos sufrieron pérdidas, lo que implicó un aumento de las preocupaciones sobre los tipos de interés. Por otro lado, los precios de los bonos brasileños, se beneficiaron de varios recortes de tipos de interés por parte del banco central. Sin embargo, al mismo tiempo, la devaluación del real pesó sobre el rendimiento de valores denominados localmente.

Perspectivas

A pesar de la leve mejoría de los datos económicos mundiales, en general, los datos económicos en las principales regiones industriales como Estados Unidos, la eurozona y Japón finalmente se debilitaron. La economía mundial parece acercarse a la siguiente etapa en el ciclo económico actual. En esta fase de reflación de ciclo tardío, el crecimiento mundial debería mantenerse, pero no debería haber más aceleración. En Estados Unidos, parece realista un aumento de las ganancias corporativas como consecuencia de la reforma tributaria. El entorno de crecimiento en la zona del euro parece fuerte con buenos tipos de crecimiento, pero el punto alto económico puede que ya se haya excedido. En China, indicadores como el crecimiento de la oferta monetaria apuntan a una desaceleración inminente del crecimiento. En principio, este entorno debería seguir favoreciendo a la renta variable, pero es probable que las fluctuaciones de precios sean más altas.

Los mercados de bonos pueden verse amenazados por los riesgos mayores de una revisión al alza de las proyecciones de tipos de interés de la Reserva Federal de Estados Unidos en los próximos meses, aunque los participantes del mercado pueden haberse ajustado a la trayectoria actual. Este desarrollo debe ser objeto de un estrecho seguimiento. El Banco Central Europeo (BCE) respondió con amplias medidas al entorno de baja inflación. En el contexto de la recuperación económica cíclica y una normalización de la inflación a medio plazo, el banco central debería finalizar sus compras de bonos en la última parte de 2018 y debería elevar sus tipos de interés claves (tasa de interés sobre los depósitos) por primera vez para mediados de 2019.
